Class Will

We, the Senior Class of January '35, having lived a full and eventful life among the highways and byways of North Central do hereby duly and legally ascribe to this, our last will and testament.

Virginia Thomas leaves her five feet two to "Frank" Johnson. This addition ought to make Gene look his age.

Mayle Ed Nicoles could use Barb CINC's toe dancing ability. He'll need it for the next Belt Hi-Jinx.

Van Gloth's habit of falling through windows goes to the guy who pays for them.

We persuaded Gertrude Jackson to leave all the letters in the print shop except the initials L. B.

Max Mekey leaves his crooning ability to Mariel Lund. If she accepts it she'll be a sure-fire torch singer.

Business is picking up. Dorothy Pickman has agreed to have her master mind to any one who can make use of it before a topic test. "One at a time, please."

George Gunn leaves his technique for hawking and pestering people (salesmanship) to Al Myers, his pal.

Pius Caputo will receive Mr. Samuel Corzetto's Pair, more pro ble. (He's got a million of 'em.)

To Carol Jean Davis, Katherine Achre wills her red hair, but we won't guarantee the results of the combination.

Bob Davis leaves his wonderful ability at chiseling to Harvey Frazier. (Not that he needs it.)

Ray Bard's gift of gab goes to the self-conscious adolescent, commonly called the freshman.

Ralph Anderson leaves what he got out of North Central to Bob Dickson (the sum total of two gym towels).

Budd Bankson has left his acting and singing to Ben Thorson along with a course on how to effectively dodge grapefruit, tomatoes, pennies, etc.

Roland Ray Coolbaugh leaves his fadge to the next commissioner (it's only gold plated anyway) with the hope that he keeps it as shining as Roland did.

Mary Heaton's senior counselors are being left to all the freshies who need them.

The whole class leaves Johnny Harris along with his trumpet and his girlfriends to the school as one of the permanent fixtures. It's not our fault, Johnny.

To that Irishman, Harold Murphy, whose ambition it is to join the House of David, we leave Manual Frer's clean cut, well shaven appearance.

Vermafine Turner leaves her blonde locks to Irene Schumacher. With this addition Irene ought to be a regular Jean Harlow.

Jane Harvey wills her winning ways to a number of "Gonzagago." The best we could do, Jane.

That "line" of Al Merry's goes to the highest bidder among the world be Romans in the Senior B class.

Princess Luckee Nord has willed her long braided tresses to that heap big Injun, Roger Snow. Be car-ful, and don't trip on that. Roger.

The baked sweet potatoes of which Barbara Hiele is so fond will be left to anyone who can stand to eat them every lunch like she can.

Florence "Jitters" Forrester leaves her two dancing feet to Phil Frazier with the hope that they will be applied on the right place.

That debate catalogue which Barbara Hill has carried around so faithfully these many years has been awarded to Dorothy Bradford.

Ernest Stowell has consented to leave his "horn rims" to Ellen McDonough provided she wears them on the end of her little "noey wosey" every day.

And so, with malice towards none and no murder aforethought, we do hereby invest upon the Senior B's the privilege of willing what they will next year, and they will. And so:

With a loving "goomby"
And many a sigh
We go wearily on our way
We're sorry to go
But this we know
We'd be sorrier yet to stay.

Duly inscribed and attested and witnessed thereof this day we hereby ascribe our signatures with a "hey nonny nonny and a bet cha cha."

BUDD BANKSON, Chairman
JANE WILSON

Class History

This is station N. C. H. S. broadcasting over a wave length of four years with an eight semester program over the senior A broadcasting system.

In the bleak and wintry month of January, 1931, the mighty eight A's became lowly freshmen and passed through a year of obscurity. But during that first year they gathered no moss and blossomed into "well-informed" sophomores in January, 1932. This semester they were joined by a hundred or more comrades from Havermale. With the super-knowledge of the original class the addition from Havermale soon learned the ropes—after ten months. These months passed quickly and they soon found themselves upper classmen. During this year many entered school activities.

Ten months pass. We're all seniors now. We have at last reached the goal which has been our aim for three years. Almost everyone is doing something for the "little frosh." Now as we are ready to leave North Central, we look back hoping that we have given something which will cause us to be remembered as students with lots of North Central spirit, who loyally supported the school.

Please bear with us now as we grow reminiscent for a little while and look back to our activities while here among our fellow students.

Several of our members have been active in athletics. Ralph Anderson and Francis Hansen set the pace for cross country and Sammy Cozzetto was outstanding in football. Carrol Tribbey proved she could do something besides high jump when she defeated William Lee in tennis.

The Girls' League and Boys' Federation have held the interest of many of our class members. During the past semester Bernadine Turner has ably led the Girls' League and Ralph Anderson the Boys' Federation. Ralph had also been the president of the senior B class in January, 1934 and is now president of the present senior A class. Several other senior A's have had this same distinction. Jane Harvey and Ruby Anderson were vice president and secretary respectively of both the senior B and A classes. Harvey Frazier held the purse strings for the class as senior B's, his duties being assumed by Maurice Swank as a senior A. We are also proud of Duckee Nord, who had the honor of being elected Football Princess this last semester. Joe McCrackin has shown his ability in editing the school paper for the last semester. The Tamarack has just been put together through the efforts of Gloria Stauffer.

"Death Takes a Holiday" presented by the senior dramatics class under the direction of Grace Douglas Leonard was one of the most outstanding plays in years. The difficult lead role of Death, or Prince Serki, was played by Dan McCauley. The other leads were: Duke Lambert, Maurice Swank and Grazia, Mildred Mootz.

There are others, too, who have done much for the school but as time is brief we senior A's are signing off, leaving the air to our senior B friends, who will soon follow in our footsteps. We hope that we, as a class, have left something at North Central that will make your senior A year as pleasant as ours has been.

Take it away, senior B's!

Calendar

Dear scientists of year 11,934 A. D.:

By the time you read this, our civilization will have been swallowed up by the march of time. It is our hope that you may bring to the notice of people of your age some of the conditions existing in the year, 1934 A. D.

To help you in your researches on conditions in the twentieth century this record of occurrences at North Central high school is left. If, in your excavations, you stumble upon this summary of events, it is our sincere hope that it will aid you materially in reconstructing a scene of this unknown civilization upon which you have stumbled. The calendar follows:

SEPTEMBER

AFTERWARD WHAT?

Are our accomplishments of four years here at North Central a thing of the past? Is what we are going to accomplish in years to come a matter for the future to decide?

"It certainly is not" is the simple answer to both of these questions. Our future is linked to our past and is indeed almost entirely dependent upon it. What we have done with our past in preparation for our work of years to come will either lead us to success or to failure. This is especially true in the case of those of us who will not be fortunate enough to go on with some specialized training.

The report which the senior A takes with him from this school is unalterable, and many times it has been the deciding factor in obtaining or losing a worthwhile position in business. The office receives many calls checking on the ability and showing of an alumni who is applying for a "job."

You, underclassmen, may not consider your grades to be of paramount importance now; but if you should look ahead to see what great value your good record will have later, then you will see the true worth of your time well spent in study and concentrated effort.

GOVERN OR BE GOVERNED

North Central high school is unique in its system of student government conducted by and for the students of this institution.

This method of control was adopted and has been in force over a period of several years with but one object in view, that is, to give high school students an immediate insight into the conduct of government affairs. Through many years of experience, it has been found that when people lose interest in their government, then surely some other agent will rise to take its place and rule them.

And so it is here; without your continued interest in school management, this elaborate plan which had been developed cannot succeed. It is your interest which keeps alive such a worthy system of student control. As members of North Central you have a part in running the school; you elect representatives to your assemblies and council, and these people whom you have chosen are put in office only to serve you, the voters. Only your expressed opinions may move a whole school to action. What we ask, for your own good, is participation in your school government. You must take advantage of this situation, or soon there will be no situation to take advantage of. For, while privileges which are abused are taken away, privileges which are not wanted are also soon removed.

SOMETHING FOR YOU TO DO

Today's watchword with many people seems to be "despair." One of the main evidences of this attitude is the feeling among some young people that there seems to be nothing for them to do in this world of ours.

This is a mistaken idea. That old adage about the better mousetrap and the beaten path is just as true today as it was the day it was written. Of course, the old frontier, as our parents knew it no longer exists and many of the problems that faced our ancestors have been solved. However, this is no reason for boredom or despair.

Scientists tell us that nothing is perfect. Therefore, although an act may be performed time and again, the way it is done can always be improved upon. Our greatest heroes have been not the men who originally invented or discovered things but those who improved upon them. Fulton did not invent the steamboat. He simply made it practicable. Columbus did not sail the first boat. Washington did not fight the first battle. Lindbergh was not first man to fly. All these heroes took the ideas and feats of others and improved upon them.

COOPERATE!

Many theories have been advanced for supremacy of man over almost all other forces in the world. One of the most plausible of these may be found in the fact that humanity is able to live and work as a unit better than can almost any other group.

The need for cooperation now that man has gained his place as master of the world is greater than when the cave-man was struggling against seemingly overwhelming odds. In the beginning people were forced to work together to avoid extermination and to gain for themselves security. Today we must cooperate in order to retain the place on this earth which our ancestors have made for us and to add to the glorious achievements of mankind.

No man has ever been able to perform a task of lasting good to his race without aid from others. Study achievements in the realms of science, exploration and invention. You will find that men who have made names for themselves in these fields have done so only with the aid of colleagues or assistants. Even literary men have based their works upon the endeavors of their predecessors.

Need for cooperation is great in high school. It is even greater when one enters the workaday life, where one's very existence depends upon the way he is able to work with others.

WHAT IT MEANS TO US

"Citizenship and Loyalty" is a phrase we've heard since our earliest childhood days. It has had varied and numerous meanings which have increased as we have gone through school.

During the first eight years of school life it applied for the most part to our ability to sing "America" and pledge allegiance to the flag at Friday or Monday morning assemblies.

It wasn't until we entered high school and got into the spirit of things that its real meanings began to develop for us. Then we began to appreciate the importance of "citizenship and loyalty." We found that North Central resembled, as a smaller unit, the United States, in that its government is by the "people" headed by a principal who has the power to veto or approve our actions and attempts at law-making.

Now the senior A's are about to graduate out of the school world into another world where in a few years they will be called upon to make important decisions at the polls. There is a universal need for public spirited and law-abiding citizens and there is no better place to learn to be one than at a school of North Central's type.

WITHOUT A GOAL

Every game one plays must have a certain object to make it interesting. Every job one attempts must have a definite purpose to be worthwhile; yet, many embark upon their most important jobs, the greatest games they will ever play, their lives, without definite goals in view.

It is useless to attempt a job without knowing what one is trying to accomplish. A person must be industrious, honest and thrifty. He must be handsome and have a good personality. Yet, he cannot hope to succeed in life if he does not know what he is striving for.

Don't grope about in the dark! Set a definite goal for yourself, and then attain it.

The Sacrifice

FIRST PRIZE STORY

By Ellen Lewis

The room, calsonined in a deadly white, lighted by a brilliant light, was unbearable to its restive occupants. They sat in straight-backed chairs staring dully into space or looking unseeingly at each other.

Bob paced back and forth in one corner of the room, passing every once in a while in front of a closed door, then resuming his striding back and forth again. Behind that door lay Dick, quiet and still, scarcely breathing; a doctor striving to keep the small immortal spark of life stirring in his body. Dick had been hurt in the football game today and—now there lay a terrible uncertainty about his condition. Bob resumed his pacing. His mind traveled back to the afternoon's game. Before it, he and Dick had seen each other, had gripped hands and "may the best man win!" He and Dick were the best of friends, almost brothers; had known each other from childhood. But there had come a time when each had picked his own career, when each career had necessitated a choice of a different college. Yet over all this, their friendship had endured. Now—they had been reunited, only for a moment, each on rival teams, each a prominent player, one a center and one a quarterback. The game had been played; each team had struggled desperately; Bob's team had won. But in the struggle Dick had been hurt, seriously. An ambulance had been called; Dick had been lifted into it; Bob had rushed to his friend in a nightmare of fear.

He paused again before the closed door. Why didn't they come out; why didn't they tell him how Dick was? He strode on, thinking, thinking.

Quietly the door opened and the doctor, swathed in white, stepped into the room. He stood a moment, scrutinizing its occupants. "Boys, Dick is in a critical condition. He has lost a good deal of blood. Unless he receives an immediate blood transfusion—he won't pull through."

Although the terse words had been spoken quietly, they seemed to thunder and re-echo through the room to the tired, tense boys. Bob stood in one corner, looking steadily out the window, his hands clenched behind his back.

The doctor paused, looked about the room. "You boys are all close friends of Dick's. That is one reason why I called you over. The other reason is—well, you boys are the most likely suited to give the transfusion. Of course this isn't compulsory. Any of you may refuse."

A tense silence; no one spoke.

"Then will each one of you come in and let me test your blood?" He turned and left the room. One by one they went in.

Bob stepped into a small laboratory and sat down on the small stool beside a table. He rolled up his sleeve; watched the doctor prick his arm; watched the blood slowly rise in the glass tube. It was a relief to be doing something; a relief to escape that searching, gnawing, growing fear. Slowly he left the room and walked over to the windows.

The moon was rising and its white brilliance gave everything a ghastly hue. The building of the college cast dark shadows across the campus; a white frost lay on the ground; a deadly quiet reigned over the grounds. It seemed to Bob, gazing across the campus, that he was isolated from all the world, detached, remote—the only animate objects—behind him in that small white room. He turned to the windows. Tomorrow was the championship game; today's game had been the deciding factor; Bob's team was to play the championship game. His mind went back to the first of the season. He had gained his position on the Varsity eleven by hard work and persistence. He had gone in an unknown man and was coming out as one of the candidates for the All-American team. His name had been lauded—had been sent across the field in shouts of praise. He had become a valuable player on the team; he played center—now all this was threatened. What if Fate ordained him to be the person to give the transfusion? Bob moved restlessly.

The buildings were dark and still; the spires of the chapel rising into the blue, sharply outlined against the white disk up in the sky. This college had become home—had become the pivot upon which his entire life moved.

Now—now, Dick had come; had come and threatened to break down his work—to crush his hopes—to take away everything. Bob's anger mounted swiftly against Dick. What right had he to do this? Why had he ever come? His anger vanished. Dick—Dick was lying in there, helpless. It was no fault of his that this had happened. He had come to do his best; luck had been against him. Bob remembered how Dick, when he was small, when he had been hurt—had lifted his chin, defiantly blinked back the tears; proclaimed to all the world that he was no weakling! Dick was helpless now—waiting for someone to help him. Bob wheeled, choked back a sob and started pacing again. What difference did a college game make to the saving of Dick's life? The game's glory—transient; his friend's comradeship—permanent. He turned to the windows again. He saw the familiar campus, the chapel, the Arts building covered with vines, all a mute appeal to his loyalty and comradeship. Bob gazed dully at them, worn out by his internal storm. Dick was dying—dying. Perhaps he was the only one who could help him.

The door opened; the doctor spoke in a monotone, "Bob, you're the one."

Bob wheeled, a flood of emotion threatening to overwhelm him. He glanced out of the windows—and saw the leaves on the vine around the window slowly curling up with frost, slowly turning brown—dying. He shivered. Dick was dying. Raising his hand to his brow, he gave the campus a mock salute, turned around and spoke in a quiet voice, "Yes, sir, I'm ready."

Mule Mac

SECOND PRIZE STORY

By Robert Urbahn

To Talortown, Mac was legend. He, it was reported, started all incendiary fires about the small town. He it was who broke the mayor's window and let the town clerk's prize poultry loose, according to those honest officials. When wayward Talortowners were shy about confessing their own transgressions, they conveniently declared Mac the transgressor with few qualms of conscience, for Mac wasn't considered to be "all there."

His strange gait in walking and his ill-mannered speech had won for him all sorts of excuses for his eccentricities. "He's just nuts," or "One of them there pesky mules of his musta kicked his noodle when he was a little shaver," were popular expressions that I heard concerning him. In reality, he was a good fellow; every dog was his friend, horses and mules took to him easily, and small children delighted in his companionship.

Mac's fiery temper usually was his downfall. If the small boys of the town taunted him, the curses which floated up and down Main Street usually elicited a complaint from the staid matrons of the Ladies' Aid Society. Upon one occasion the constable suffered slight bruises for attempting to quiet Mac.

Of course, like all other small towners, Mac chewed tobacco; in polite society an unpardonable sin, but in Talortown plug-chewing farmers were as common as cud-chewing cattle. It was no uncommon sight to see Mac swagger down the street sluicing tobacco juice at every step and talking at the top of his voice.

To me, Mac was a harmless fellow who divided his time in town between the pool halls, the hardware store, and the United States Forest Service Office. There it was that I first met him. My duties as Assistant Supervisor of Mount Pine Forest Reserve included hiring all job-seekers for work in the field. Mac's visits to my office were always made with the excuse that he was applying for work, although my private opinion was that he liked the easy chairs and the shiny brass spittoon.

On a cold windy day in early March he literally blew in the door bursting with news. "Say! Mr. Holliday, did ye hear the news? Old man Pettibone froze te death in the blizzard whilst he wuz milkin' last night . . . Say! D'ye reckon I could stick around'n warm up a bit, bein's ye wouldn't be wantin me te freeze too?"

As work was slack, I encouraged him, "Why,

Mac, of course I don't want you to freeze; sit down and tell me all about it."

"Well, seems to a come about this away. The old feller wuz out'n the barnlot milkin, an old Betsy kicked 'im in the head. Afore the old lady found 'im he was frizzed stiff. I got a bad kicker out-n my place in the foothills, too. But she ain't ez bad ez the mules got. Them mules sure kin lift their hoofs. Ye wouldn't be needin my packtrain, would ye? They're in right smart condition n're good'n fat arter chawin hay an oats all winter. Packin's kinda slack right now afore the campers an them eastern fellers come along... Effin ye won't hire me, I'm goin' te mosy over te the hardware. They'uns over there keeps a better fire th'n the gov-ment does."

His parting shot as he went out the door was a end sent in the general direction of the spittoon. That was the last of Mac that I saw until late summer.

The Super and I had our hands full that August. A huge fire was raging over on Cedar Creek and we were sending men by the hundreds. For the first time in three years men could get work when they wanted it. The office swarmed with Indians, Greeks, Slavs and town loafers; all seeking jobs as cooks, bulldozers, or line fighters.

Our main difficulty lay not in the lack of men but in the lack of pack trains. Mules were at a premium. Men were of no value on the line unless they had food; and the only way to get food up the creek was by packtrain. At last, against my better judgment, I hired Mac's mules. The government usually hires reputable men to guide its packtrains which carry valuable supplies. In view of this fact, it was with many misgivings that I watched the trucks wind up the road toward Pete King Creek, the last outpost, bearing Mac and his mules.

Not many days later the news came from Rogers, the ranger up at the blaze, that a crew of twelve men and five mules had either been burned to death or trapped in a burnt-over pocket. The Super ordered a plane to cruise over the burnt territory and search for them to no avail. The pilot reported poor visibility due to smoke. A rescue party seemed impossible under the circumstances.

The morning after the crew disappeared, Rogers called me up and gave me a piece of his mind about fellows who hire mule-drivers that deserted. Mac had failed to show up with the mules that morning. There were also two dozen gunny-sacks and a month's supply of oats taken from the commissary.

A day passed and no more was heard about Mac and the mules. Late the next night Rogers telephoned that the crew of men had been found alive and that Mac was the one who had brought them in. By noon the whole burg buzzed with the news; by night the entire town had declared Mac a human benefactor. The Hero of the hour shut his mouth like a clam. One night he came in and told me his story.

"Ye know, Mr. Holliday, people's sayin I'm a hero, but I didn't do nuthin. Why I couldn't let them mules the fellers had with em starve to death with nuthin but charcoal to chaw on effen they was alive! So I ups an goes te fetch em back. Them wet gunnys come in perty handy te keep them mules' eyes frum smartin. I just loaded em up with some oats frum the cook house and druv em into the fust likely burnt spot I come to.

"That fire was some warm. It kinder blistered my hoofs and face a bit, but them mules hed wet gunny sacks tied on their hoofs an threw over their flanks. I haint gone fur'n five miles when the fire kinda died out some and the smoke thinned out.

"The wind waz blowin south, so I figgered they'd be a goin way frum the fire, 'n so we set south'ards. I waz scairt them five mules 'ud starve afore we got there so we kept a right smart pace.

"About sundown we come upon them five jack's pawin the charcoal an the fellers with em lookin kinda empty like. First, I fed the mules some oats. The fellers cussed me plenty fur not bringin along some beans, but I wuzn't worried about their stummicks.

"We wuz mighty glad to get out'n there. Nuthin' te see but great black stumps 'n nuthin' te walk on but charcoal. The air kinda floated with dirt'n stuff so's we cudn't breathe much. Off'n the distanee the flames waz lap-pin up the cedars. Fire makes nuthin' where there waz suthin' afore, just like people tryin' te make suthin' outa nuthin' like me. A mule's a donkey an ye eain't make a high stepper out'n him. A tobacey squirtin' eussin' feller sure an no 'count an ye eain't make a high stepper out'n him nuther.

"We just back-tracked out'n there the way we'uns come in an we'uns got te camp in time te stow away some beans.

"Old Lady Vanter didn't like it euz I said I'd done the same fer any mule, when she thanked me fer pullin' her Lem out'n the fire. This hero bunkum's no fun. Thet white-collared feller over te the church wants I should jine the choir and the mayor's lookin up a medal fur me som-eres. I don't cotton te such stuff, but I said effen he hankered te do a good turn, that I'd like a tolable good feed fer my mules an a new plug of tobaccy.

"The Ladies' Aiders want I should be an honorary member an they'uns wants te reform me, but effen I laid off'n eussin, them mules wouldn't savvy my lingo."

To this day Mae still drives his packtrain over the trails, and his homely philosophy still rings in my ears. "A mule's a donkey, an ye cain't make a high stepper out'n him. A tobaccy squirtin', eussin feller sure am no 'count, an ye cain't make a high stepper out'n him nuther."

Mac had proved himself.

Ever Faithful

By Lawrence Ames

No better friend
A man ever had.
Only a dog, who now lay
At his feet, dead.

"My, that's sure an old beauty," said old Captain Crane as he stood on the bridge of his light ship at the entrance to the harbor of Astoria. A reassuring nudge was felt by the old man as Pal, his faithful old shepherd dog, poked his nose into his hand.

The ship in question was the brand new liner, the President Washington, on her maiden voyage. At the bridge of this ship was good old Captain Crane's son, Harry. It was his first ship, and it was up to him to bring her back in one piece. Two blasts of the whistle greeted the old man as his son passed. Captain Crane was proud, and Pal's intuition told him that something great was going on, although he had no inkling of the passing events. Just as the ship cleared the last rock of the point, a small motor boat swerved out from the point, and only a deft move of the big ship saved the motor boat from being smashed.

"These darned kids that have motor boats! Someday one of 'ems going to sink a ship or going to get sunk themselves, especially that Jack Lawton and his boat, the Jinx. He and his old man got more boats and money than they know what to do with." Thus commented the old captain as his son had saved the life of his worst enemy.

Followed by the dog, the old captain turned and went about his work with a jaunty air. Pal was about ten years old and had been a faithful servant to the family for years. He was born and raised at sea. The dog always went wherever the captain went.

For many years the old man had taught his son the ways of the sea, and now he was the captain of the largest and newest liner that had ever been built in the Pacific Northwest. It was his first chance to prove himself worthy of a sea-captain's rating. He had had one contender for the position as a captain of a Red Star Liner. He was Jack Lawton, but Harry had won the test, and as a result had made himself an enemy of Jack Lawton's.

The days went by rapidly, for there was not much trade on the river at this time of year. The old man spent his time shining up the light and oiling the machinery. "Got to keep the old light burning for Harry," said the captain to Pal one day as the dog shoved an inquisitive nose into the old man's pocket, looking for his daily lump of sugar. After getting this, he went outside and lay down. The captain followed him outside and looked at the weather. "Sure sign of fog tonight," commented the captain. "Dirty weather for any one to sail in. I hope Harry takes it slow coming home. Wish I could go out to meet him, but I have to stick by this old tub.

The captain and the dog rowed to shore that afternoon to get some supplies. After purchasing a few provisions and his regular mug of beer, the captain rowed back. Just as he neared the ship, he heard the staccato bark of a racing engine, and around the side of the ship popped Jack Lawton in a speedy racer. He roared off to the South, and quickly disappeared behind the point. The captain clambered aboard quickly to see what was going on. Dusty, the man who ran the engines, was asleep. After a careful inspection of the machinery, he found that everything was apparently all right. So the captain dismissed the subject of this strange visit of Jack's and sat down to read.

That evening as the captain set about preparing for the night's work, he heard two blasts of a liner's whistle. What could that mean? Could Harry have made the journey a day ahead of time? If so he would have made a record of ship transportation and won for himself the permanent position as captain of the liner. The liner must be at least five miles away and would be there in five minutes. The fog was settling rapidly, and a strong wind had set up. Captain Crane's light would be the guide for the ship as it came into port. As he threw the switch for the light, something blew up in the hold. The light would not go on, and the fog horn would not blow. Ambling aft and down the main hatch as fast as possible, the captain found that something had blown the gasoline engine from its place. This made it impossible to run the generator that supplied the power for the lights. The damage was great and not readily fixed. The only resource was to hook up the storage batteries until the damage could be repaired. The little boat was tossing and pitching, making it doubly hard to work. While working frantically, the captain heard a muffled thud and the roar of a steam whistle.

"Hey, Captain," shouted Dusty from above. "That ship's gone aground on Deception Rock. This wind'll sink 'er in twenty or thirty minutes. I think it's the President Washington, too."

Reeling from the blow of this sudden disaster, Captain Crane stumbled up the companion way and looked out through the fog. There, about two leagues out, he barely discerned a huge hull banging incessantly against the rocks of Deception Point.

"Start the Diesel below, and we'll see if we can't help with the rescue. There will be many drowned if she goes down in a hurry."

Dusty dashed below faster than any negro boy ever dashed. He had the motor going in a minute, and Captain Crane slipped the two anchors and started off. Soon he was near the liner, but the waves rolling in from the open sea prevented him from maneuvering in close to the ship.

Boat after boat went over the side of the liner, only to be swamped in the high tide. Soon there came a coast guard boat and the coast guard land crew. From shore a breeches buoy was put up and about thirty people taken off. Through the fog one could hear the shrieks and cries of the people still on board. Captain Crane was busy hauling in people from the raging sea, when there came a rending crash, a roaring grating of steel and a crescendo of screaming as the huge liner slid off the rocks. With a sickening swish, the liner sank her head in the sea like an ostrich in the sand and headed for the bottom of the channel. It was a horrible sight, striking terror to even the heart of old Captain Crane, for it was his son's ship, and he had probably gone down with it. Standing there on the deck with his head bowed, the old man's thoughts flashed back to the motor boat that he had seen near his boat that afternoon. Did that have any bearing on the reason why the light had gone out of commission causing his son's ship to wreck? No, he didn't think so. It must have been an accident, because how could the son of a respectable citizen stoop so low as to endanger the lives of hundreds of people just to gain a chance to get the captaincy of one of the Red Star liners.

While standing in reverie in the fog there as Dusty worked heatedly hauling in the passengers, Captain Crane heard a sharp bark from Pal, who stood beside him. The dog heard an indistinct hail that came softly through the fog. Pal started barking excitedly and jumped up and down on the deck wagging his tail.

"What is it, old boy?" asked the captain as he looked out from the deck. "Steady, boy, it's just some more people shouting."

The dog would not be quieted. He struggled and jumped around trying to get away from the arms of the captain. With a desperate lunge, Pal slipped his wet body out of the grasp and leaped overboard and started out through the towering waves toward the place where the ship had gone down. Everybody on deck called him back, but it was to no avail. The dog's head disappeared behind a swell. The undertow of the ship was terrible as people were floundering all around. What was urging that dog on into the very jaws of death? Bent with the thought of losing his two dearest possessions, Captain Crane turned his thoughts and attention to his work. He had not gone more than two hundred feet when he heard a bark on the port side.

"There's the dog," shouted someone. "He's swimming this way and has a man in his mouth by the collar." Surely enough, there came Pal with someone clutched tightly by the collar with his mouth. Whoever it was was unconscious, and a dead weight to the dog. Immediately, the captain fastened a rope around his waist and had some one hold it while he lowered himself over the side. Swimming to the dog, he passed a rope about the man. As Pal realized that his burden was safe, he gave a little joyous yap and disappeared below the surface. As he was an old man and had a job already, it was a few seconds before the captain could rescue the dog. Finally he found the dog and signalled to be pulled aboard. Once on deck he turned his attention to the man. As he pushed the man's hair aside to give him artificial respiration, he sank backwards to the deck. Dusty hastily brought him to.

"Oh, my son, my son," moaned Captain Crane as he staggered to his feet. He bent over his son's prostrate form and began the respiration, at the same time directing someone to look at the dog. Soon there were signs of life in Harry's eyes, and he was carried into the cabin and put in the captain's bunk. The ship turned back to shore many hours later, its deck flowing with people. The eyes of old Captain Crane, although his son was safe, were running with tears as he steered his ship into the main dock of the city.

The following week these lines flashed across the tops of the nation's newspapers.

"Jealousy Causes Ship Disaster on Pacific Coast" and below in the column were the following lines:

"Following the urge to gain the captaincy of a Red Star liner, Jack Lawton was convicted today of maliciously damaging the machinery of the Deception Point light ship, thereby causing the liner, President Washington to be wrecked on the rocks.

There was much written and said about this disastrous affair from coast to coast, but nothing was ever written about the little tombstone in the dog cemetery on the hill above the harbor that bore the inscription:

Here lies

To Him Who Hath

FIRST PRIZE ESSAY

By Margaret Strand

The last rays of the sunset fade into darkness. The day is done. A man takes his empty lunch pail and walks down a dusty road to his home. He is tall and well built. The muscles of his body are those of an athlete, and his skin is bronze, like that of a native. A strange but honest gleam shines in his eyes. Like the village blacksmith, he looks everyone in the eye, because he owes not anyone. He works that he may live. Everyday honest sweat gathers on his brow, as he earns the daily bread for his family.

When the frozen stream once more becomes a brook among green willows, and a million birds sing their songs of spring, he is glad. Now he plows up the soil and plants tiny seeds. They are covered with the soft brown earth, and after much care they will produce food for his family. On every blade of grass there is shining dew, and sunshine from the blue sky above fills the air. It cleanses his soul which overflows with love, beauty, and wisdom. The perfume of a lilac bush covered with clusters of small star-like blossoms, intoxicates him with a delightful sweetness. Tenderly he cares for his green corn so that it will grow and produce grain.

On Sunday mornings the church bell rings, and he and his family attend church. With great reverence, he prays to God. He is thankful for the earth, for men and for God. Often he reads to the children from the family Bible. He is very enthusiastic about the activities of his community and joins in with the happy group of neighbors. He sends his children to school. At election time he votes for the man who he thinks should hold the office. He offers his aid to everyone, and as a result is considered a good citizen.

The earth is covered with a blanket of snow, but he has no fears. He has a supply of food from his garden. He bows his head and gives thanks to God.

When the bugle calls for men to fight in the war, he does not hesitate to give his services; but seeing strong men suffer and die and hearing the constant roar and noise from the guns make him see the mistake of war. He longs to return but there is little hope. Living in the memory of his own sweet home, the sight of the barren shell-struck earth drives him mad. He has aided in the destruction of God's work. He has killed men and living things. The thought paralyzes his brain, and he goes about his duties in a daze.

After the Armistice, he returns home. The green growing grass and the knowledge that all the world is at peace again soon make a rapid change in him. Now he is his own self again. He is very patient, noble, courageous and understanding. He is a good citizen.

A SIDE GLANCE

FIRST PRIZE POEM

By Mary Barrett

In one of the eighty apartment rooms
A feeble old lady stays.
Bereft of a place in her children's homes
She drags through the endless days.

She sits by her window and gazes down
At the ever bustling street,
Teeming with people whose cozy homes
Await their weary feet.

Or she totters along the corridors
Yearning for friendly talk,
But the uniform row of doors is shut
Through the course of her lonely walk.

She subsists on the soups and custards
That are kind to her toothless gums.
And each day she awaits the postman's step
For the mail that seldom comes.

She is barred from the pulsing, throbbing world,
But her path ahead is clear.
She is rounding the last short lap of life
With the Great Goal looming near.

THE NEW LOYALTY

SECOND PRIZE POEM

By Shirley Freese

The Spartan youth
Spurred on by his state
To a battle uncouth
By prejudiced hate
Was caught up by his glory and fame.
Song and story his name still proclaim.

The Roman child
Hearing fiery tales
Of barbarians wild
In Britain and Wales
On a glorious battlefield fell.
Of his fate the best story books tell.

The patriot's son
'Gainst tyranny fought,
Hard battle he won,
And freedom he bought.
Many school children praises must sing
Of the freedom he sought hard to bring.

Thou, modern boy,
Hast cause to rejoice,
Mayest sing with great joy,
With praise raise thy voice.
In a better and easier way
Thou may'st serve thy great country today.

Best wishes and good luck

Raymond

He is wishing lots of luck to a swell kid.

North Central's debating season for the fall semester up to January, 1935 was successful with two wins for the Indians. The question for debate for this season was: Resolved, That the Federal government should adopt the policy of equalizing educational opportunity throughout the nation by means of annual land grants to the several states for public elementary and secondary education.

At the first of the semester the debate class was divided into two sides, which held two practice debates with each other. Also, practice debates have been held with out-of-town high schools.

Our first state forensic contest resulted in a victory over Wilbur high school. This contest was held at North Central on Nov. 16. Our team, which upheld the affirmative of the question, was composed of Gladys Wellhauser, Barbara Hickey and Mary Barrett. These debaters had developed a good line of argument and presented it in a most convincing manner.

On Dec. 7, North Central defeated Gonzaga in a hard contest, making a record of two wins and no losses for the Indian debaters thus far. North Central's negative debate team, which showed much fire and polish, consisted of Barbara Heil, first speaker; Dorothy Beckman, second speaker; and Bob Berg, third speaker.

On Jan. 11, West Valley met our team here. The date for the triangular debates with Rogers and Lewis and Clark will be Jan. 25.

Debate at North Central is made a success largely by the fine leadership, hard work, and cooperation which is given the debate teams by Miss Grace Campbell, coach.

Junior Red Cross

North Central raised $500 this year for the Junior Red Cross clinic. This amount was raised by Red Cross representatives from each room. 41 of the 65 rooms reached their goal. Miss Winkley's room, Carol Tribbey, representative, was the first to attain 100%. Miss Everett, room 100, Margaret Amundson, representative, was second.

Miss Robinson, school nurse says, "North Central students receive more each year than they contribute."

Few realize that all the money raised by the Junior Red Cross is spent for the benefit of the Spokane Schools, both grade and high.

The Junior Red Cross hospital at Howard street and Sharp avenue is the first hospital in the United States to be maintained entirely by the students of the public schools. This money goes for equipment, linen, surgical supplies, services of a paid surgeon for tonsil and adenoid operations and two school dentists.

5000 tonsil and adenoid operations have been performed.

10,000 students have had their teeth put in good condition at the clinic.

THE ARTS

Senior Dramatics

"Death Takes a Holiday" was presented by the senior dramatics class Jan. 11 under the capable direction of Mrs. Grace Douglas Leonard.

This play was written by Alberto Casella and the translation for American stage was done by Walter Ferris. It was one of the ten best plays written in 1929. Although it is a rather difficult piece to act and is not usually undertaken by high school students, "Death Takes a Holiday" was intelligently and ably presented by this senior dramatics group.

Dan McCauley was an outstanding success in his portrayal of "Death" and gave to this role an understanding and sympathetic interpretation. Mildred Mootz was natural in the character of "Grazia" and handled her role with great ease.

All the others in the cast also did splendidly, with Edith Gothenquist as Alda and Bob Boger as Corrado especially fine in their parts. Everyone in the class worked hard in cooperation with Mrs. Leonard to make the presentation a success.

The setting and the lighting effects for the stage were very beautiful and gave the stage a lovely yet fantastic appearance that was appropriate for this production.

The play deals with the three-day holiday of Death as a mortal spent in the castle of Duke Lambert. Death desires to know why men fear him and why they cling to their lives. He falls in love with Grazia, finding that it is love which makes life bearable.

The cast included:

Death .....	Dan McCauley
Cora .....	Barbara Heil
Fedile .....	Tom Fry
Duke Lambert .....	Maurice Swank
Alda .....	Edith Gothenquist
Duchess Stephanie .....	Beulah Wadham
Princess of San Luca .....	Mildred Peterson
Baron Cesara .....	Norman Bankson
Rhoda Fenton .....	Barbara Hickey
Eric Fenton .....	Henry Rae
Corrado .....	Bob Boger
Grazia .....	Mildred Mootz
Major Whitread .....	James Brown

The service of the executive committee was invaluable to the success of the play. It was composed of the following: Grace Edson, assistant director; Jane Harvey, property manager; Winifred Redmond, makeup manager; Tom Fry, business manager; and Budd Bankson and Henry Rae, advertising managers.

The Orchestra

The orchestra, under the splendid direction of C. Olin Rice, has for many years been one of the worthiest and most valuable of the organizations at North Central. It furnishes the fine music for school entertainments such as the class play, the operetta, and convocations. Also at the Baccalaureate Service and at the Commencement Exercises the orchestra does its part. Only part of the orchestra was chosen to accompany the operetta, "Rose of the Danube."

At the Commencement exercises the orchestra will play the Athalia Overture by Mendelssohn. Paul Gronemeier will play a piano solo, and Daryl Wilson will present a vocal solo.

The fifty members of the group this year are: First violin—George Low, Concert Master; Bernice Bentley, Bill Minnick, Evelyn Kaesemeyer, Lester Hansen, Charles Uhden, Gaylord Zimmerman, Tom Fry, Shirley Mac Erickson, Margaret Childs, and Florence Leyda.

Second violin—Edna Dumbolton, Vina Green, Eunice Guthrie, Dorothy Twitchell, Gertrude Lake, Romaine Pearson, Barbara Shepard, Jane Kranzush, Bernadine Hardy, Gilbert Graham, Duane Corkrum.

Viola—Bob Armstrong, Audrey Ryan, Roberta Bowman, and Jeannette Whiteside.

Cello—Charles Johnson, Marjorie Robinson, and Alita Watterud.

Bass—Mary Heaton and Dean Vanderwall.

Flute—Dorothy Bradford, George Gunn, Frances Snow, and Lawrence Ferrante.

First Clarinet—Stanley Hughart.

Second Clarinet—Eloise Reed and Hugh Mitchell.

C Saxophone—Eldon Miller.

Alto Clarinet—John Kapek.

Bassoon—Albert Myers.

First Trumpet—John Harris.

Second Trumpet—Bill Brown.

First Horn—Bill Vaughan.

Second Horn—Dwight Russell.

Trombone—Robert Jordan.

Sousaphone—Melvin Walker.

Drums—Charles Rice.

Piano—Margaret Hoffman.

The Band

North Central's band is known as the best high school band in the Northwest. Under the skilled baton of Lowell C. Bradford it has earned for itself a place of distinction.

There are 100 members in the band this semester of which 18 hold official positions. They are: Stanley Hughart and Bob Jordan, bandmasters; Harold Drinkard, business manager; Eldon Miller, uniform manager; Harvey Frazier, assistant uniform manager; Armin Knaack, stage manager; Ray Bradbury, property manager; Bob Berg, speakers' bureau; Robert Davis, head librarian; George A. Gunn, Van B. Gloth, Paul Gronemeier, Paul Luenow, Walter Burger, assistant librarians; Charles Neighbors, drum major; Herby Jacobs, Robert Urbahn, Ben Blenner, assistant drum majors.

This fall the band had charge of the circulation of The News. The Derby Five did its part in the campaign by playing during the lunch periods. In return for this service, Mr. Green, print shop instructor, presented the band with a set of lyre bells in behalf of The News.

For the second successive year the concert band was invited to play at the Fox Theatre, Oct. 15, for the annual Teachers' convention. The selections played were: "Facheltanz" by C. Meyerbee, "In a Persian Market" by Ketelbey, and "Stadella" by Flowtow. "Jota" by De Falla Kochanski was played as a violin solo by one of the members of the band, George Low.

The entire band marched in the Armistice Day parade, and played at the Shrine football game. Also, the band has added much to the enjoyment of other football games and various convocations by its fine playing. The band played at the Parent-Teachers' Association meeting, Tuesday evening, Nov. 13.

A splendid semi-annual concert will be presented by the band on the evening of Feb. 1 in North Central's auditorium.

Marche Slave by Tschalkowsky and Orpheus Overture by Offenbach are the two numbers to be featured by the concert band. Solo numbers will be given by Robert Jordan and John Harris, Stanley Hughart and Paul Luenow; George Low and Charles Johnson; and Charles Rice and George Mathison are presented in duets.

The novelty number was a rag-time wedding featuring Harold Drinkard as the bride, John Harris as the groom, and Robert Berg as the minister.

The Pep Band furnishes the spirited music for many of our convocations, and it is especially valuable at our pep cons, where it accompanies the various songs and yells to be given at the football games. The members of the Pep Band are: Saxophones: Craig Batchelor, Eldon Miller, Jack Bierce, Albert Myers, Stanley Hughart, Bob Jorstad; trumpets: John Harris, Walter Burger, Ray Bradbury; violins: George Low, Sheldon Kilham, Charles Uhden; trombone: Bob Jordan; sousaphone: Melvin Walker; piano Paul Gronemeier; string bass: Bob Davis; guitar: Don Eagle; drums: Roy Marquardt.

The following are the members of the Derby Five, which is composed of boys from the Pep Band: Stanley Hughart, leader and first clarinet; Paul Luenow, second clarinet; John Harris, trumpet; Herbert Krauel, trombone; Bob Jordan, sousaphone; Herby Jacobs, drum major; and John Luppert, standard bearer. A glorified Derby Five band, which was commanded by four drum majors, Charles Neighbors, Robert Urbahn, Ben Blenner, and Herby Jacobs, presented a novelty intermission act at the Thanksgiving football game. Besides the regular members of the Derby Five, Roy Marquardt played the snare drums, and George Low, the bass drum.

The members of these two groups, as well as the members of the entire band, deserve much credit for their hard work and splendid service to the various projects of North Central.

Operetta

As lovely, graceful, and melodious as a Strauss waltz was the annual operetta, "Rose of the Danube," presented Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 7 and 8 in the school auditorium.

The mythical kingdom of Eurolania provided a colorful background for the musical production, which, from the instrumental overture and opening horns to the finale, was a great success with its beautiful songs, waltzes, interesting plot, and splendid acting. When the curtain first went up, the audience was delighted at the transformation that had taken place, for the stage looked like some romantic, old kingdom with castles and towers outlined against a very blue sky.

The leading roles were portrayed by the following:

Darrel Davis, a camera man .....
 ..... Wesley H. Parrish
 Galooski, prime minister of Eurolania .....
 ..... C. Allen Anderson
 Belladonna, a lady-in-waiting .... Daryl Wilson
 Montmorency, king of Eurolania .. John Miller
 Queen Florinda, his wife .. Kathryn Almquist
 Rose, his eldest daughter ..... Muriel Lund
 Daisy, his younger daughter .....
 ..... Angela Daugharty

Prince Karl, his son ..... Harold Lines
 Count Sergius von Popova, a conspirator .....
 ..... Lawrence L. Ames
 Demetrius Doodledorf, his right-hand man..
 ..... John H. Hill
 ..... Woodrow Grant
 Pereival McPipp, a moving picture director..
 ..... Morton E. Allen
 Mrs. Priscilla McPipp, his wife .....
 ..... Agnes Dee Daniels
 Pamela McPipp, his daughter .... Betty Jones
 Muriel Lund and Wesley Parrish carried their leads with ease and sang beautifully the duets, "Only One Rose" and "King of the Waltz." Among the other outstanding musical numbers were: "Dishes in the Sink," sung by Kathryn Almquist as Queen Florinda and Angela Daugharty as Daisy; "Typical Topical Tune" sung by John Miller as King Montmorency; "Though You Wander Away," sung by Harold Lines as Karl and Betty Jones as Pamela; and "That's Why the Blue Danube's Blue," sung by Lawrence Ames, John Hill, and Woodrow Grant as Popova, Demetrius, and Trombonius. These three conspirators played their roles exceedingly well and, with the king and Belladonna, they furnished the comedy.

Other numbers were sung by trios, quartettes, and quintettes with the help of a splendid chorus. The intermission number, "To a Strauss Waltz" was very beautiful.

The story takes place during the week of the Rose Festival in Eurolania, a little country on the Danube river. The royal family is entertaining American tourists seeing the sights—Darrell Davis, a Hollywood camera-man, and Percival McPipp, the famous director, with his wife and daughter. Nevertheless, the air is filled with gloom as Count Sergius von Popova is plotting against the throne and threatens to start a revolution.

Meanwhile, McPipp plans to put everyone in the movies and make a super special feature picture in Eurolania.

Happily, Darrell and Karl, the king's son, overhear the Count's plot. They catch him in the act and save the lives of the royal family. Darrell is rewarded by the hand of Rose, the king's lovely daughter, while Karl receives his prize in the love of Pamela McPipp.

The chorus consisted of the following: Dorothy Ruth Burns, Jeanne Cassels, Audrey Denson, Doris DeVaney, Violet Fyhrle, Jean Hinton, Eva Lu Kilham, Helen Miller, Roberta Moxley, June Louise Sheler, Verla Boyer, Betty Brenner, Bette Burk, Helen Cross, Gladys Hendricks, Mary Joe Lantz, Verda Mellinger, Pauline Miller, Dorothy Tess, Inez Wheeler, Raymond Fox, Paul Gronemier, George A. Gunn, Marvin Kull, Donald Ness, Earl Spargur, Rod Sutton, Vern Thornburg, Charles Uhden, Thane Weisberg, James Barker, James Davis, Maurice Fisk, Henry Hoskin, Mel Pazen, Harry Pierce, Lawrence Robertson, Dwight Russell, Norman Smith, Ben Thorson.

The dancers, beautiful in their gay costumes were: To a Strauss Waltz: Barbara O'Neil, Zelda Comstock, Betty Devine, Betty J. Fritch, Arlene Hatfield, Stella Mac Leuer, Cleo West, Cappie Oldershaw.

Songs: Myrtle Heberling, Arlene Jordahl, Helen McLendon, Frances Mitchell, Maida Johnson, Beverly McDonald, Marjorie Peterson, Loraine Stapleton, Elsie Zeider, Anne Reed, Effa Frese, Sylvia Fischbach, Muriel Whitmore, Valine Perdue, Helen Anderson, Lillian Bell.

Romance: Beatrice Jesmore, Helen Lackmann, Dorothy Paden, Gladys Wellhauser, Florence Forrester, Helen Gale, Jeanne Peak, Betty Lee Hancock.

Kut-Ups: Dorothy Bixby, Margaret Hoefer, Betty Manring, Evelyn Spencer, Phyllis Fyfe, Muriel Price, Alice Oatman, Frances Oatman, Dorothy Kennedy, June Senter.

Spirit of U. S. A.: Muriel McDonald, Betty Collins, Dorothy Giesa, Barbara Mastro, Mary Barrett, Maude Taschereau, Violet Jacobs, Marian Burch, Armenia Riley, Mary Mastro, June Morse, Margaret Mae Miller.

Special recognition is due the following who have devoted many hours of their time and much hard work to make this operetta a success: C. Olin Rice, musical director; Grace Douglas Leonard, dramatic art director; Elsa Pinkham, ensemble and dancing coach; E. E. Green, business adviser; Emma Dalquest, wardrobe adviser; Ethel M. Ashley, scenic decorations; J. D. Youngman, scenic construction; and C. Allen Anderson, scenic painting.

Football

The city prep conference of '34 was thrown into a mixup by the unintentional use of ineligible players by every school except Lewis and Clark. The State Athletic high school board was called upon to make a decision about the different school standings and the city championship. The official statement was that Harry Jereako, dynamic halfback of the North Central squad, was ineligible and that all the games in which he had played, whether won, lost or tied were to be forfeited to the Indians' opponents. This left the Warriors at the cellar position with three losses, one victory and two ties, and also gave the Gonzaga Bullpups the highest standing at the end of the series and also the city championship for the fourth time in five years. Other games that were forfeited were: Gonzaga, one and Rogers, three.

The different standings at the end of the grid season were as follows:

	Won	Lost	Tied
Gonzaga (champions)	4	0	2
Rogers	2	3	1
Lewis and Clark	2	3	1
North Central	1	3	2

INDIANS DEFEATED BY WALLACE

The North Central Braves traveled to Wallace, Idaho, for their first big game of the season, only to come home with a 6 to 0 score in favor of Wallace.

Wallace was considered a tough opponent, having won over North Central last year and also as they were the Panhandle champions of '33. The Warriors let the Idahoans score in the first period of the game, but blocked the kick that would have made the score 7 to 0. The rest of the game and especially in the last half, North Central pushed the Wallace team all over the field but failed to click well enough to score a touchdown. Contos, Indian fullback, starred in the game, smashing into the Wallace line in the last half for a gain of four yards per rap.

GONZAGA DEFEATS INDIANS

North Central took its second defeat of the season from the Gonzaga Bullpups on Friday, September 28. The game was played on the home field and was a 19 to 0 loss for the Indians.

The three touchdowns of the game were made in the second, third and fourth quarters respectively, and two more were stopped by the brilliant defensive playing of Randall and Hagland. Both boys made spectacular tackles in the game. Coach Buckley thought that the team needed a little more experience but when it came to spirit the players had plenty.

In the second period, Pupo broke through the line for a 19-yard gain, only to be hauled down from behind by Randall of the Indians. One line play and again a big gain by Blackbird of the Bullpups, only this time Contos got him on the Braves 6-yard line. Lambert snagged a pass on the 2-yard line and Pupo went over for the score. The try-for-point was missed. The other two touchdowns were made in the same flashy, running style, one by Goodwin and one more by Blackbird. The game ended with the ball in the middle of the field. This action showed the Indians that the city series were to be hard and bitterly fought.

ROGERS WINS OVER TOUGH NORTH CENTRAL TEAM

In a fast moving game played on Roger's home field, Thursday, October 4, the Pirates beat the Indians, 7 to 6. The Roger's touchdown came in the first quarter and the Indians scored in the fourth period.

As all the predope was against North Central's chances of scoring, the game proved to be a big upset in the city series. The Indians were fighting hard in the last quarter to score but because of incomplete passes, failed. At the very start of the battle, Rogers ploughed down to the Indians goal line and put the pigskin over for their touchdown of the game. It began to look as though the "wiseguys" were right, but the second quarter showed that the Indians had just begun to fight.

The Indians stopped Roger's aerial attack on their 8-yard line and recovered a fumble. They kicked the ball out of their territory only to have the Pirates push it back with a series of line smashing plays and runs. It was on the 3-yard line and on its way over only to be stopped for four straight downs by the defense of the North Central team. The Indians then kicked out of danger.

The North Central touchdown came at the start of the fourth quarter with a pass from Hagland to Jerenko that put the ball on Roger's 2-yard line. Jerenko went over on a play but the Indians failed to convert.

INDIANS BEAT LEWIS AND CLARK

The Braves received their first victory of the year on Friday, October 12 when they won the game with the Lewis and Clark Tigers. The tilt was played in the North Central stadium and the score was 6 to 0.

The Tigers did not make one dangerous threat during the game but were on their toes all the time to keep the Indians from scoring and running rampant. Contos and Jerenko starred and showed that they were the versatile players of the team. Evanoff of the Lewis and Clark team was hurt in the first quarter and had to be helped from the field. In the second period, the ball was fumbled to Lewis and Clark. Robinson, fading back for a pass was downed on the Tigers' 20-yard line for a loss of 23 yards for the Tigers. Then came the fumble in the game that gave the Indians their touchdown. The first play after this the Braves unleashed a passing attack that put the ball on the Tigers' 1-yard line, Contos going over for the points on a line smash. The Indians failed to convert, leaving the score 6 to 0 in favor of North Central.

No threat was again made by either team in the last half although both fought a hard battle.

GONZAGA WINS OVER INDIANS

On a muggy, rain-swept field, Thursday, October 25, North Central was defeated by Gonzaga 32 to 0. The game was played before one of the smallest crowds of the year and showed the fans that Gonzaga had a strong contending team for the city title.

In the opening period of the game, a blocked punt gave the Bullpups their first chance to score and they put the ball over for the first touchdown of the game. Another blocked punt in the second quarter gave Gonzaga their second score and Baker tackled Holsclaw of the Indians behind the goal line for a safety to give Gonzaga two more points.

In the third quarter, Gonzaga made two more touchdowns but failed to convert. The score was then 26 to 0 for the Bullpups. The Indians held the Gonzagans for less yardage in the second half but was unable to keep them from scoring.

ROGERS WINS NORTH CENTRAL TILT

Rogers nearly clinched the city series when they won a hard fought game with a one-point lead from North Central Friday, November 2, on the Indians home field.

Most of the game was played in the middle of the field with the punters of both teams seeing plenty of action. North Central was the first to score, as Hagland's long pass was completed. Contos failed to convert, leaving the score 6 to 0 in the favor of the Redskins.

In the second half, Bates kicked off for the Braves, Rogers running the ball back to mid-field where they were forced to kick, losing the ball on downs. The punt was touched and Rogers recovered the ball on the North Central goal line. This gave Rogers their chance for a touchdown and they put the ball over. Perry converted, making the score 7 to 6. The Pirates then went for the North Central goal in earnest and were on the 1-foot line when the gun went off, but had at last lost the ball on downs to the Braves. Contos and Ferrante starred for the Braves.

INDIAN BRAVES WIN OVER CENTRAL VALLEY

The Redskins came home after a hard fought game with Central Valley with the score 14 to 6 in North Central's favor. The Indians scored in the first and last periods of the game and Central Valley scored in the second quarter.

Central Valley on their own 40-yard line tried to punt. Christie, Indian lineman, blocked the kick, recovered it and ran 30 yards for a touchdown. He is the only lineman to make a touchdown on the North Central squad this year. Again in the last period of the game, after a long march down the field, North Central put the ball over on a series of power plays.

Central Valley scored in the second quarter when the Indians' second string was put in. Bob Dickson made the second touchdown of the game and kicked the first point.

DEER PARK LOSES TO NORTH CENTRAL

Just two days after the Central Valley game, the Braves traveled to Deer Park to come home with another victory of 13 to 0. Coach Buckley used the second string in the game as the first string played in the Central Valley scrimmage.

The Indians scored in the second and fourth periods and had at least eight other chances to score. The action was in the Deer Park territory all of the game.

INDIANS WIN TURKEY DAY GAME WITH LEWIS AND CLARK

The North Central Braves came home victorious on Thanksgiving day, November 29 with a win over the Tigers of 13 to 0. The game was played in a muddy Gonzaga stadium that caked both the ball and the players.

The teams' main defense was to kick on the first down and to let the Tigers have the ball to play with. This gave the Tigers the chance of fumbling with the wet and slippery pigskin. The Indians fumbled the ball to Lewis and Clark twice in the first quarter and gave them every opportunity to score, but the Lewis and Clark team did not have the final spark and finishing touch that would have made it a possibility. In the second quarter Harry Bates made a 65-yard run on a line buck. A pass and the ball rested on the Lewis and Clark's 1-foot line. Stewart went across on a spinner off-tackle play. The Braves failed to convert, which left the score at the half 6 to 0. The second touchdown came in the last quarter when Harry Bates intercepted a Lewis and Clark pass on the North Central 10-yard stripe and ran 90 yards for a touchdown. Contos snatched the line and the point was made.

The rest of the game was in the center position of the field with neither team making any dangerous threat.

NORTH CENTRAL BRAVES OUT RUN BY TIGERS

Indian runners lost to the Tigers 25 to 30 on the Mission avenue course Wednesday, Oct. 7. Although the Tigers took first, second, and third places, eight out of first twelve places went to North Central runners.

Paschal Sorey of Lewis and Clark took first place, finishing the course in 7:19. He took the lead and kept it easily from the start. The runners in order of the first five places are: Paschal Sorey, L. C.; Bill Faulk, L. C.; Jack Gregory, L. C.; Ralph Anderson, N. C.; Orville Lopp, N. C.; Ed Stinson, N. C.

The record of the course, 7:09.4, was set two years ago by Ralph Anderson. This mark has not been broken since.

NOVICE CROSS COUNTRY RACE

On Tuesday, Oct. 23, the novice cross country race was run over the Stevens street course.

Orville Lopp took first place, with Floyd Nichols and Ed Stinson coming in a close second and third. This race is run annually and is for the purpose of giving every student a chance to participate in athletics and also to help pick the team for the annual contest with Lewis and Clark.

INTERCLASS CROSS COUNTRY

Ralph Anderson led his class to victory in the annual interclass meet on Wednesday, Oct. 31. The race was run over the Mission avenue course.

Anderson finished the run in 7:32. The seniors finished first with a score of 18. The juniors had 53, sophomores, 63, and the freshman class was at the bottom of the list with 68. The class having the lowest number of points won.

SCHOOL TENNIS MEET

Neil Dickson met Bill Maniatis in the finals of the school singles championship Wednesday, Oct. 31 on the North Central courts.

This match decided the champion of the school tennis players. The first set was taken by Bill, six games to three, but Neil came back to take the championship by beating Maniatis six games to one.

Girls' Athletics

HIKING

Girls' hiking, under the supervision of Miss Mitchell, faculty adviser, has been one of the many outstanding feminine methods for the building of health. Visits have been made to Down River, Little Spokane, Whitworth vicinity, High Drive and Spokane Children's Home.

The last hike to the Spokane Children's Home was made for the purpose of visiting the orphans that are being sponsored by students of North Central. Special features of the semester were the supper hikes. A new dish was emphasized each time, among which roasting potatoes in ashes, barbecued chicken, and baked eggs and apples had an important part. These hikes were not only healthful but entertaining to all that participated.

ALL ACTIVITY AWARD

Each semester finds more and more girls interested in P. E. awards. Points are given for participation in any sport, dental O. K.'s, medical certificates, walking slips, clean rompers, and League work. Upon earning four hundred points, a girl is given a shield. For each additional four hundred points a bar is earned, which is placed on the shield.

TENNIS

The tennis season was one of great success in spite of the fact that the season was two weeks late in starting. Roberta Bowman was captain of the team; Frances Oatman, manager and Duckee Nord, chairman. Schedules were arranged so that the singles and doubles could play at different times. The girls were ranked according to their standard of playing. The team was again fortunate in winning the tournament between Lewis and Clark and North Central.

The Senior A girls on the team were: Roberta Bowman, Kathrine Achre, Genevieve Baltzell, Betty Peterson, Beverly Skadan and Carol Tribbey.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

About seventy-five girls took part in the inter-class basketball tournament this fall. Nearly every night after school for about one month the gym was crowded with girls who were either watching, refereeing or playing basketball. Seven teams, each made up of girls from one grade, were organized by Miss Rita Jahreiss, who supervised all games.

The following girls were made captains: Irma Larson, Virginia Thayer, Margaret Keseter, June Senter, Dorothy Ralston, Eunice Fransen and Beverly Skadan. After fighting many hard battles the 11 B's came out victorious.

make-ups in gym were given to all the girls who played. The chairman was Alice Baer; manager, Helen McLendon; towel cupboard, Evelyn Alverson.

RECREATION HOUR

The recreation hour, under the supervision of Margaret Hoefler and Neil Dickson, closed after a successful semester of fun and pep. Tournaments were held in ping pong and checkers, these being supervised by Alice Oatman, Robert Little, Jack Crawford and Earl Dunton. This contest encouraged members of the faculty to match their skill against that of the students. Miss Mitchell, faculty adviser, helped a great deal in making the season a successful one.

SKATING

The Ice Arena is still the center for Spokane's winter sport, skating. A special rate of ten cents an afternoon is given to the students who are attending North Central. Dan McCauley, chairman, with the help of Marion Mallette, Barbara Mastro and Larry Owens give the skating slips to the students. Free tickets are given away each time by drawings.

TENISQUOIT

This new sport was introduced in North Central last year. Time is taken in each gym class to teach the girls the art of the game. The sets in the tournaments are played whenever the girls have a vacant period or before school. The scores are recorded by the chairman, and the girls having the highest scores play another set to determine the winner.

Model Activity List

We herewith present the inactivity list of one John Froshmore, who entered this institution of learning in the year '31 with the infirm intent of doing nothing and gaining the most from absence of action. To wit: Decided to wait until fall to start engaging in school activities, February, '31. Thought about turning out for freshman football, October, '31. Looked at the track announcement, March, '32. Thought it would be a good idea to take out a band instrument if only it didn't take so much energy, September, '32. Would now be a junior if grades hadn't come out so suddenly, February, '33. Cross country would be a good thing if you didn't have to run, October, '33. Couldn't decide which of two clubs to try out for, February, '34. January, '35, four years down and about ten to go, take it away, ash man!

Virginia Thomas: How many sheep are there in that herd?

Ray Bard: Forty-nine.

Virginia: How do you know so quickly?

R. B.: Easy! Count the legs and divide by four.

How Are Your Nerves? Try These Simple Tests

When you're in a center seat at the theatre in the middle of an exciting first act and have six people on one side of you and six on the other side and you want to get up and leave, get up and leave.

When a bullnecked waiter gives you a half and two quarters in change, stare at him un-blinkingly and say, "Change one of these quarters for me, fellow, I want to leave you a tip."

When a burly Irish traffic cop halts your car and says, "You got away before that light changed, buddy," stick out your chin and retort, "Well, what if I did?"

Since the "Yuba Plays the Tuba Down in Cuba"

Became the kind of a hit that couldn't miss
It seems that every lyric writing booba
Is manufacturing merchandise like this:

"When Lena Leans Upon Her Concertina,"

"When Kitty Sings a Ditty on the Dam,"

"When Biddle Plays the Fiddle for the Queena,"

"When Zara Plays the Zither in Ziam,"

"When Annie Plays the Pianny out in Philly,"

"When Leo Down in Rio Plays the Flute,"

"When Morgan on the Organ Knoeks 'Em Silly,"

"When Do-Do Plays the Oboe out in Butte,"

"When Gimbel Bangs the Cymbal out in Staten,"

"When Olga on the Volga Stops the Show,"
Then Lippman grabs a crow bar in Manhattan
And blithely wrecks the family radio.

The eye is capable of many acrobatic stunts, as appears from an examination of recent fiction. Witness the following examples:

"Her eyes roamed carelessly around the room."

"With her eyes she riveted him to the spot."

"He withdrew his eyes from her face and they fell to the floor at her feet."

"Their eyes met for a long breathless moment and swam together."

"Marjorie would often remove her eyes from the deck and cast them far out to sea."

"He dropped his eyes and a look of intense pain came over his face."

"Her eyes rose from the table under the spell of his commanding voice."

The country store proprietor was leaving for a vacation and had hired the town's dumb-bell to work for him. The parting instructions he gave were that if anyone were to ask the price of corn to tell them it was three for five cents, if they wanted to know how good it was, say "the best in town" and if the customer decided not to buy, to say "if you don't somebody else will."

Some time later a man entered the store and the following conversation ensued:

Customer: What time is it?

T. D. B.: Three for five cents.

C.: Say! Are you crazy?

T. D. B.: The best in town!

C.: Do you want me to knock your block off?

T. D. B.: If you don't somebody else will.

A young man who had finished his meal was pointing out to the waitress what he thought was an error in his bill. She, however, made it clear that the amount was correct and, as the young man departed she murmured audibly:

"Yea. Make 'em look like Lincolns."

Soph: Just think.

Frosh: What?

Soph: Think what a hard time two cross-eyed people have looking each other in the eye.

Mother: Poor Jimmy is so unfortunate.

Caller: How's that?

Mother: During the track meet he broke one of the best records they have at college.

"Where have you been?"

"In the hospital getting censored."

"Censored?"

"Yes. I had several important parts cut out."

A Mouse in her room woke Miss Dowd.
She was frightened it must be allowed.
Soon a happy thought hit her
To scare off the critter,
She sat up in bed and meowed.

And mothers still wonder where their sixteen-year-old daughters learn the things that they knew at the same age.

Miss: Your husband is sulking again; what's the matter?

Mrs: Oh, it's just because I used his silly old tennis racket to strain the potatoes.

"It says here a butcher found a collar button in a cow's stomach."

"That's all wrong. How could a cow get under the dresser?"
